

Implementing broadcast HDTV copyright restrictions would be a step backwards. It would be tantamount to telling citizens they can no longer record and watch their programs later, would complicate the sharing of taped TV episodes, and require everyone to buy from an industry of innovative copyright circumventing hardware or lean harder on Internet-based (non-legal) distribution. This is not progress.